
Scripted handbag by Raygold Carter

Posted by Amy - 2007/09/18 01:33

My first win was a special scripted handbag auction offered by Raygold. The auction went smoothly and I think I got a good deal price-wise so no problems there.

<http://i231.photobucket.com/albums/ee135/amyblazer/handbag.jpg>

The handbag itself is actually very nice with a red Louis V like pattern. I think the idea here is great. You wear the purse and other people can touch it to receive a note card that you put in it. The possibilities of what you could put on the note are endless and could be much fun. The bag also tells you how many people took a note and even gives you some information about their residency status. So far so good. However, the floaty text on the handbag says "Pimp - Raygold". In fairness this was shown in the auction image but I assumed that this could be changed. Now that I have the bag though I don't see anyway to change that. Certainly I don't want to walk around with info about a pimp :ohmy: on my purse! I think I'll delete the script and just use the bag which isn't too bad at the price I paid but I was really looking forward to the note card giver.

Sorry, I have to give this win a rating of only 6 out of 10. If that floaty text could be changed though it would have been easily a 10 out of 10.

=====